Lithuanian Song Celebration is an overall national cultural phenomenon spiritually equal to ancient Greek Olympic Games.

The national song and dance celebration tradition has lasted for a hundred years and grew up into the most significant and largest cultural event in Lithuania. It exalts man's creative self-expression, vitality of the national culture, and promotes artistic activity by periodically gathering amateur artistic groups of different genres and culture professionals to enormous festivals that evoke enthusiastic society's response.

From the cultural point of view the national song and dance celebration tradition is an expression of cultural-national identity based on a mass art lover movement of choir singers, dancers, and musicians. Especially singing has been universally acknowledged to be the most valuable aspect of the song and dance celebration.

From the civic and political points of view, the song and dance celebration tradition has always been, especially during occupation periods, a means to maintain the national identity and a secret weapon to protect aspirations for independence. The fact that the independence in all the three Baltic countries was restored with the help of a 'singing revolution' in 1990 is largely a result of the mentality nurtured by the song and dance celebration tradition.

After the restoration of independence, the events of the Song and Dance Festival attract Lithuanians from 15 countries all over the world. This is why the festival has acquired the status and name of the World Lithuanian Song and Dance Festival.

In the newly liberated, independent Baltic States the song and dance celebration has acquired a form of a grand national events held in the capitals of the three States and is becoming a way of spreading the cultural tradition that reinforces patriotic feelings of the three nations and their people.

At present, approximately 30 thousand lovers of art gather in Vilnius to celebrate song and dance.

The commemoration of the State Day on the 6th of July is included into the structure of the festive song and dance celebration events. In 2003, the traditions and symbolism of the song festivals of the Baltic States (Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania) were attributed the status of masterpiece to be inscribed on the UNESCO Non-material Heritage List.
